Biography

Clem Herman is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Communication and Systems at the Open University in the UK. She has worked for over 25 years as an educator, practitioner and researcher to support women in ICT and other science, engineering and technology sectors. Before joining the Open University, she was the Director of the Women's Electronic Village Hall (WEVH) in Manchester pioneering the use of ICTs to empower women and as a tool to combat social exclusion. Clem is currently running an award winning online course for women returning to technology careers and her most recent research has been about the impact of career breaks for women in European SET companies. She is the editor of the International Journal of Gender Science and Technology
