Biography

Dr Gill Kirkup is a Senior Lecturer in Educational Technology at the Institute of Educational Technology, Open University, UK. She is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, and of the Higher Education Academy and a member of the Association of Learning Technologies and the Fawcett Society. She is a member of the editorial team for the International Journal of Gender Science and Technology. From 2008-2010 she was seconded to the UK Resources Centre for Women in Science Engineering and Technology as Head of Research, Data and Policy. She has researched and written about gender and technologies since the 1980s, and is the author of numerous journal articles as well as the co-authoring and co-editing eight books. She is particularly interested in gender and learning technologies, and in the opportunities provided by new web technologies for knowledge creation- by women and about gender. She approaches both research and practice from the perspective of cyborg theory, and is motivated by the idea that research and practice are both about phronesis: - ‘wise practical action’.

She has a blog ‘Gynoid Times’ at http://www.open.ac.uk/blogs/Kirkup
