International Relations, Geopolitics and Global Governance (UOC, IBEI)

The specialization course in international politics and global governance offers an in-depth insight into the main problems in international politics at present, considering both the economic aspects and the politics of international relations in the modern world. The specialization course covers both the formal and most visible components of international politics, as well as the less evident aspects of global governance processes, with the involvement and interaction of a broad range of public and private actors.

The course is designed to provide specialized training and advanced analytical and conceptual tools to understand and analyse the complexity and dynamism of international society. It also aims to provide a solid foundation of knowledge on International Relations, from both a political and economic standpoint.

Objectives and Competences

The goal of this program is to introduce participants to the complexities of world politics, making them aware of the multiple dimensions existing in the international arena and facilitating their understanding of economic and political decisions, taking the geopolitical context and policy processes involved into consideration.

This program will provide and enhance the following competences:

- Conducting complex analyses integrating a large number of socio-political variables.
- Forecasting possible developments in world politics and global governance.
- Translating theoretical and conceptual constructs into refined expert interpretations.

Aimed to

This specialization course is designed for graduate students with Bachelor's Degrees in social sciences (Political Science, Sociology, Economics, Business and Administration, Social Sciences), other Bachelor's Degrees and non-graduate students interested in international policy issues and concerned about the problems that the modern world faces. The level of the course subjects is equivalent to a Master's Degree, but non-graduate students will be accepted provided they have minimum level knowledge to follow the program.

Profiles

The participant profile is broad: firstly, graduate students with an interest in international studies and geopolitical issues, and, secondly, professionals and other interested parties who require a better understanding of modern international decision-making processes.
